Declaration of Ethics

As a non-profit association, German Biochar e.V. is committed to the environmentally sound production and sustainable use of biochar to promote environmental protection. The association supports research and teaching on biochar and its effects for the benefit of the environment, humans and animals. It promotes the sensible use of biochar to permanently remove carbon from the earth's atmosphere and thereby contribute to reducing global warming and achieving the Paris climate goals.

Any form of intended/intentional damage to the environment, humans and animals is incompatible with the values and objectives of our association. All members and bodies of the trade association undertake to observe the ethical-moral values and objectives of the trade association as well as legal provisions in the production, trade and use of biochar. They pay attention to socially balanced and fair ways of production, work environment and application methods.

For the trade association, the quality of biochar is essential, which is defined by its stability, carbon content and being pollution-free in accordance with the European Biochar Certificate or equivalent standards.

In the production of biochar, attention is paid to the preferential use of regional renewable raw materials, a well-controlled process flow in the wide range of temperatures and a positive ecological balance (LCA) of the production process.

Only those biochars are put on the market which comply with the legal regulations as well as the quality guidelines set by German Biochar e.V. and, if possible, are labelled with a recognized standard certificate (e.g. European Biochar Certificate).

The board of directors of the association shall ensure to create the framework conditions for compliance with this declaration of ethics and that each member agrees to be bound by this declaration of ethics.
